

President of KNDU
LTG LEE Seok Gu

Welcoming Remarks

Greetings,

I am Lieutenant General LEE Seok Gu, President of Korea National Defense University.

Following its success last year, Korea National Defense University is delighted to open an International Security Course for the members of the USFK and officials from embassies and defence attaché offices.

For the past 60 years, the ROK-US alliance has played a constructive and important role for maintaining security of the ROK and stability in Northeast Asia. We particularly recognize the troops of the USFK, for they have crossed the Pacific to be stationed in the Korean Peninsula for the sake of Korea's national security and regional stability.

As the center of national security education and research, Korea National Defense University, at its Seoul Campus, offers a tailored course for those interested in Korea's security policies. It is our hope that the lectures from the course alongside the intellectual talks with the experts and policy-makers in Korea, would provide valuable opportunities for the officers, men and women of the USFK and members from the embassies in Korea, in deepening their understanding of where ROK stands today.
